

Amedeo Modigliani's
Sitting Nude with Crossed Hands, (c.) 1917

Subject - Alice Prin - age 16
Would become known as
"Kiki de Montparnasse" in 1922
Kiki, "Queen of Montparnasse" in 1929 throughout was the "Essential Interlocutor" for two generations of Modi's Peers

An Artist Studio in Montparnasse - Richard Nevinson, first exhibited in 1926

Quote was Kiki's Memoirs - 1930 English Edition - Chapter XV Montparnasse Life 1917 - Speaking about Restaurant "Chez Rosalie's" {Lilliputian Historical Site} only four tables where Alice worked for several months - 1914-15 Quote: "The customer who got her goat the most of all was Modigliani. All he did was growl;
he used to make me shiver from head to foot". "But maybe he wasn't so good looking!"

Artist Rendition - below depicts how Modigliani's painting will appear after cleaning and minor restoration. The painting, oil on canvas, below was created using the same color palate as Modigliani.

Below is an image of Modigliani's "Lying Nude with Hands Joined" (c.) 1917. The Unnamed painting to the right is also by Modigliani and obviously the same model. After conducting a full evaluation of the available materials on the painting it is highly likely the subject of both these paintings was Modigliani's favorite muse, Alice Prin. Convincing are features around the face, nose, mouth, eyebrows, bob haircut. These elements eerily consistent with Pacific Arts Collection's painting done of Alice in 1917. Also similar is the title of our painting, "Sitting Nude with Crossed Hands" that matches an entry on the Berthe Weill 1917 exhibition. Further similarities in both works are the fleshy arms, breasts, hips and pubic hair. Both are signed in black, bottom right. Worth note the presence of the work in Ceroni means the publisher, Ambrogio Ceroni reviewed the painting, its provenance and had conversations and meetings with the painting's owner.

An Artist Studio in Montparnasse

First exhibited in 1926

Artist

Christopher Richard Wynne Nevinson 1889–1946

Medium

Oil on canvas

Dimensions

1270 × 762 mm frame - 1425 × 913 × 68 mm

Collection

TATE

Acquisition

Presented by H.G. Wells 1927

Reference - No. 4231

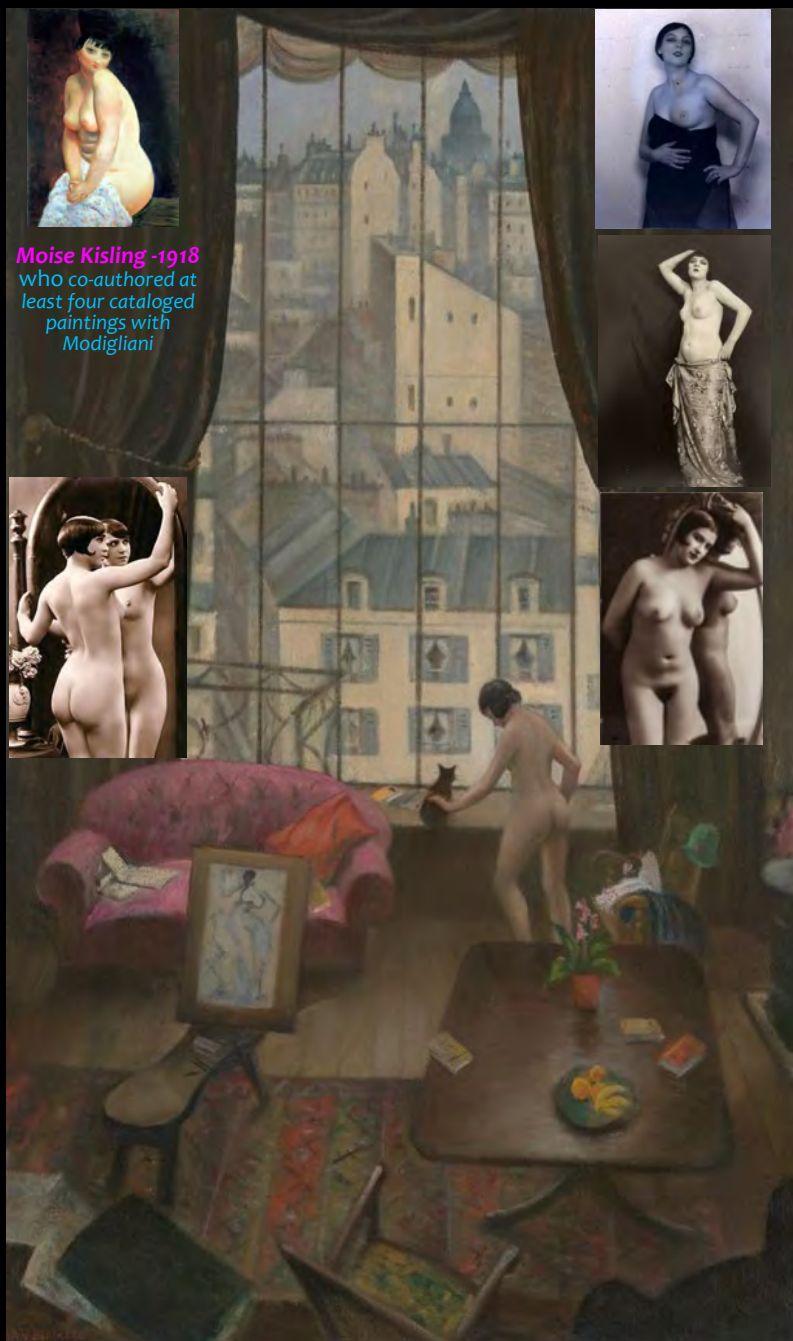

Catalogue entry:

Inscr. 'C. R. W. Nevinson' b.l.
Canvas, 50×30 (127×76)
Presented by H. G. Wells 1927
Exh: Leicester Galleries, March 1926 (55), as 'Montparnasse' Lit: Nevinson, 1937, pp.177–8, repr., after
p. 216

Above: Amedeo Modigliani's Lying Nude with Joined Hands (c.) 1917

Above right - Julian Mandel - Alice Prin - 1917
notice similarities in body-type, hair, arms, rear and hips.

Moise Kisling -1918 who co-authored at least four cataloged paintings with Modigliani

Tate Gallery Modern - British Paintings, Drawings & Sculptures, Volume II - Artists M-Z - pages 479-480

"Based on a sketch made in the Paris studio of the author and journalist Sisley Huddleston, who, when the painting was first placed on view at the Tate Gallery, protested in a letter to the Paris edition of the New York Herald Tribune, 24 February 1927 (reprinted in many English newspapers), that the artist had introduced a nude figure not in the original sketch. The nude, standing by the window, not reclining on the couch as asserted by Sisley Huddleston, was, however, already in the picture when it was exhibited at the Leicester Galleries in March 1926 (reproduction printed March 3, 1926 in "The Sketch Newspaper"). The artist did make certain alterations before the painting was presented to Tate Gallery, but these consisted of the elimination of a bearded artist (quite unlike the Shakespeare-like appearance of Sisley Huddleston) at the easel, the looping up of the curtains which originally hung straight to show windows continuing on either side, and the addition of the book on the left-hand edge of the table".

Published - Mary Chamot, Dennis Farr and Martin Butlin, The Modern British Paintings, Drawings and Sculpture, London 1964, II

Other - A copy of artist, Richard Nevinson's sketch (referenced above) is shown below. Based on numerous clues, circled on image on pg 5. It is more than circumstantial that the artist depicted on the bench in front of the painting is Amedeo Modigliani. The female nude is strongly believed to be Alice Prin, who Modigliani met at "Chez Rosalie's" in 1915. There he often sketched Alice and sold the sketches to patrons. Several of Modigliani's sketches of Alice are cataloged, in private collections & gallery's. Alice Prin, (Jewish decent) would become known as "Kiki de Montparnasse" in 1922 after meeting Man Ray received the second half of her title Kiki, "Queen of Montparnasse" in 1929.

Chapter 7 - The Lost Studio of Montparnasse

The painting had hung in the Tate Gallery for nearly a century, silent and unassuming. No crowds gathered around it. No art historians clambered to decode its meaning. It was simply there—An Artist Studio in Montparnasse, by British painter Christopher Richard Wynne Nevinson.

But beneath the layers of oil and pigment, a secret had been hiding. A secret so profound that, if true, it would rewrite a piece of art history. It took over 2,500 hours of relentless research—scouring archives, cross-referencing sketches, and unearthing forgotten letters—to uncover the truth.

And the truth?

This wasn't just a painting of an artist's studio. It was a painting of the studio—the Montparnasse studio shared by Nevinson and Amedeo Modigliani.

A scandalous realization. Because if that was Modigliani in the painting... then the nude figure standing by the window could only be Alice Prin—better known as "Kiki de Montparnasse" a title given to Alice in 1922 at the age of 22, under the tutelage of Man Ray, who she had a stormy decade long affair.

The greatest muse of the Parisian avant-garde.

The pieces had been hiding in plain sight. A red velvet pillow, seen in multiple photographs. A white shawl draped over a chair, a signature from Modigliani's 1917 nude portraits, appearing in dozens of his works. And a forgotten letter, buried in the pages of history, accusing Nevinson of altering the painting before it was presented to Tate.

But why?

Why would Nevinson try to erase the past?

A Shared Studio, A Hidden Past

The world remembers Nevinson as a bold painter, a modernist who captured the grit of war and industry. But few knew that, for two years, he had shared a studio with Modigliani in the heart of Montparnasse.

The revelation came like a shock-wave. A seated figure in the painting—long assumed to be just another artist—bore a haunting resemblance to Modigliani. The angular jawline, the placement of the ear against the thick beard, the way he slouched, lost in his work.

Modigliani had lived in Montparnasse at a time when the world was against him. He was poor, drinking too much, his health failing. But he was also a genius, producing work at a feverish pace. And next to him? Nevinson.

Watching. Sketching. Absorbing.

It had been so obvious, yet so overlooked.

But there was one detail in the painting that held the key to it all.

The nude figure by the window.

Alice Prin - The Muse Who Owned Paris

Alice Prin was thrown out of her mother's home at twelve years old. Alone in Paris, she survived on the streets, taking any job, she could—until an artist found her and put a pencil to paper.

By 1922, she was legendary. Officially crowned KIKI, "Queen of Montparnasse" in 1929 in a lavish ceremony. A muse to the greatest artists of her time—Man Ray, Fujita, Kisling, Calder, Hemingway and perhaps most famously... Modigliani.

It was no secret that Modigliani adored her. He sketched her obsessively. He saw something in her that no one else did—something raw, untamed, almost electric.

And so when the research team examined Nevinson's painting, there she was. The same bobbed hair. The same posture. manner of her arms. The same red velvet pillow seen in multiple photos and under Alice when Modigliani painted her in 1917.

And yet... when Nevinson's painting was first placed on view at the Tate Gallery in 1927, the controversy erupted.

Sisley Huddleston, a well-connected journalist, wrote a scathing letter to the New York Herald Tribune. He claimed Nevinson had added a nude figure to the painting that hadn't been in the original sketch. But research proved otherwise—the nude had always been there.

Huddleston wasn't upset that a nude had been added. He was upset because he knew exactly who she was.

Alice Prin

The girl who had once been a street urchin. The girl who had grown into the untouchable icon of Montparnasse. The girl whose image, immortalized in Nevinson's painting, linked her to Modigliani in a way no one had ever realized before.

The Secret Edits That Changed History

But something happened between the painting's first exhibition in 1926 and its arrival at Tate in 1927. Nevinson changed it.

- He removed the bearded artist, who else could it be but for Modigliani
- He looped up the curtains, revealing more of the windows
- He altered the basic beige fabric of the curtains in favor of heavy dark velvet, likely red
- Curtains that originally hung straight to show windows continuing on either side
- Which version was accurate? - likely the velvet - depicted in many of his nudes
- He added the book on the left-hand edge of the table - a distraction, an attempt to shift focus

Why?

The answer, researchers believe, is simple - fear.

Modigliani's reputation was already infamous. His name was tied to scandal, to wild nights and tragic endings. But Alice? She was something else entirely.

She was still alive. Still famous. Still a fire-brand. At the peak of her stardom. Crowned KIKI, Queen of Montparnasse in 1929 in a lavish ceremony.

And in 1926, a painting of Modigliani, sitting in a studio next to a teenage Alice, would have raised too many questions. Perhaps Nevinson worried that people would recognize the girl in the painting. Perhaps he feared the Leicester Galleries would refuse to continue to show it. Perhaps he simply didn't want to be caught in the storm that was sure to follow.

So, he did what any artist under pressure might do.

He edited history.

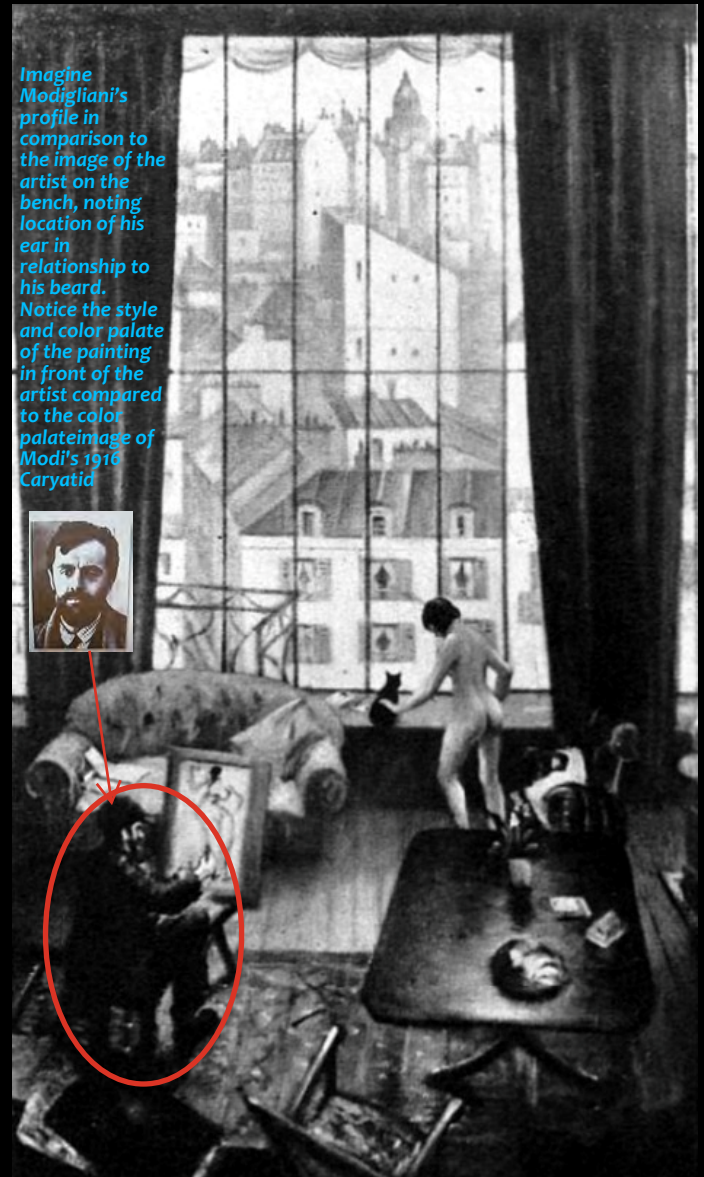

"Le Violon d'Ingres" (1924)

"Kiki's" infamous photo by Man Ray sold for $12,400,000
Highest price ever paid for a photograph

Altered Painting, (left) -- Original Painting black & white sketch referred to in Tate entry on page 7

Imagine Modigliani's profile in comparison to the image of the artist on the bench, noting location of his ear in relationship to his beard. Notice the style and color palette of the painting in front of the artist compared to the color palette image of Modi's 1916 Caryatid

Clues circled in red above lead to no other explanation or conclusion that the Studio pictured above is the Studio that Modigliani shared with Richard Nevinson.

- Signature white shawl draped over chair
- Painting on artist bench can only be painted by Modigliani
- Portfolio on the floor, scattered canvases
- Nude model at window can only be Alice Prin, (aka. Kiki de Montparnasse) who Modi met in 1915 and sketched her often at Chez Rosalie's
- Hat on chair w/shawl consistent with hat that Alice Prin wore often
- Red velvet pillow that is seen in Pacific Arts subject painting and seen in multiple photos of Modi moving studios in 1912-13, see pg __
- Fruit bowl on table - seen in other photos of Modi's studios and in a painting that Modi and Kisling both authored - see Addendum F

The Final Clue

There was one last detail that sealed the case. A March 3, 1926, issue of The Sketch Newspaper contained a color reproduction of the painting before it was altered. In it, the nude figure is not standing by the window—but reclining on the couch.

Exactly as Sisley Huddleston had originally claimed.

Nevinson had removed the artist. He had adjusted the composition. But he had never been able to erase the truth.

And now, nearly a century later, the truth was out. An Artist Studio in Montparnasse was never just an ordinary painting.

It was a hidden portrait of Amedeo Modigliani and Alice Prin, frozen in time, locked away in the Tate Gallery for decades, waiting for someone to see what had been there, all along a love story, a scandal, a secret, a painting that refused to be forgotten

A hidden portrait of the two, an intimate setting, frozen in time locked away in Tate Gallery for decades, waiting for someone to see what had been there all along

Could in be that Nevinson experienced serious blow-back from Leicester Gallery at the scene of a nude model half his age on the couch in in the studio he shared with Modigliani. The gallery must have known the artist in the painting on the bench was indeed Modigliani, certainly Nevinson knew the model was Alice Prin. None of Modigliani's other nudes had the distinctive bob haircut. The body-type is consistent will photography from the same period.

Pacific Arts Collection will soon receive a copy of the March 3, 1926, "Sketch Newspaper" that printed a color image of the painting with the nude model in Nevinson's painting reclining on the couch as Sisley Huddleston proclaimed. We are also trying to locate the Feb 24, 1927 Paris edition of the New York Herald Tribune and "many English newspapers" that Sisley Huddlestons letter was printing in. He of course an eye-witness to the original sketch done in his Paris studio.

Further, Modigliani's signature white shawl in over two dozen of his 1917 Nudes is draped over the chair behind the nude model. The green hat behind the shawl, (top right of chair) is similar to the style of hat that Alice wore, see page 22 . The canvases and satchel scattered on the floor behind artist bench was typical of Modigliani. The furniture is consistent with many photo's of Modi's other Monparnasse studios. Also in many of his nude paintings from 1917 a red couch is present.

No need to stretch ones imagination to realize that the artist that Nevinson removed from his painting could not be any other artist of the period other than Modigliani. Keeping in mind the two of them shared a Studio in Montparnasse for 2 years. Certainly no one but Modigliani painted in the style depicted in the painting resting up against the easel. There are numerous examples in Dr. Paul Alexandre's book, the "Unknown Modigliani" and are included further in this Report.

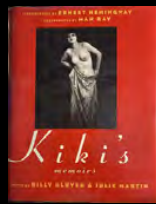

Imagine Modigliani's profile in comparison to the image of the artist on the bench, noting location of his ear in relationship to his beard. Notice the style and color palate of the painting in front of the artist compared to the color palate image of Modigli's 1916

Modigliani - 1917

Left: "Lying Nude with Joined Hands" (c.) 1917 - Ceroni Recently attributed to Alice Prin

Right: Alice Prin taken by Julien Mandel 1919-20 turned sideways Also, the Cover Picture of "Kiki's Souvenir's" - 1929 Kulver/Martin Edition & Back Cover of Assouline's Deluxe Edition above center

Maurice Mendjisky Alice Prin "Seated Nude with Joined Hands" 1918-19

Kisling - Alice Prin - "Seated Nude with Joined Hands" 1918-19

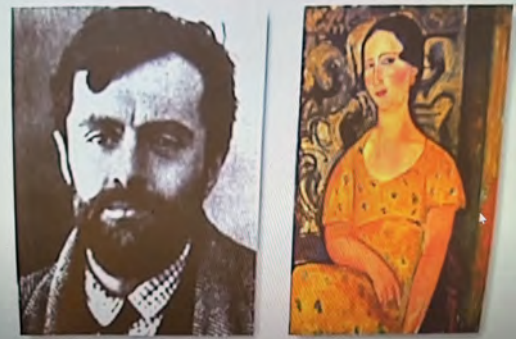

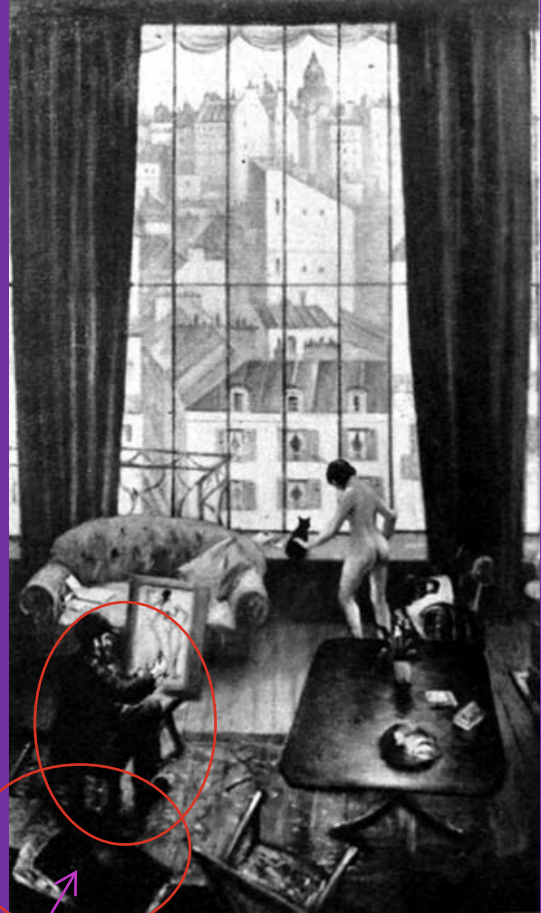

Kisling - Alice Prin "Seated Nude with Legs Crossed" - 1918-19

Amedeo Modigliani Sitting Nude with Crossed Hands (c.) 1917 Model: Alice Earnestine Prin to become known as "Kiki de Montparnasse" in 1922 Kiki, "Queen of Montparnasse" in 1929

Confirmation Clues - Notice the striking similarity to the black portfolio on the floor circled in photo of another Modi studio and on the floor of Nevinson's painting. Notice resemblance of the bearded artist that was/was not on the artist bench in Nevinson's painting compared to the photo of Modigliani in 1917.

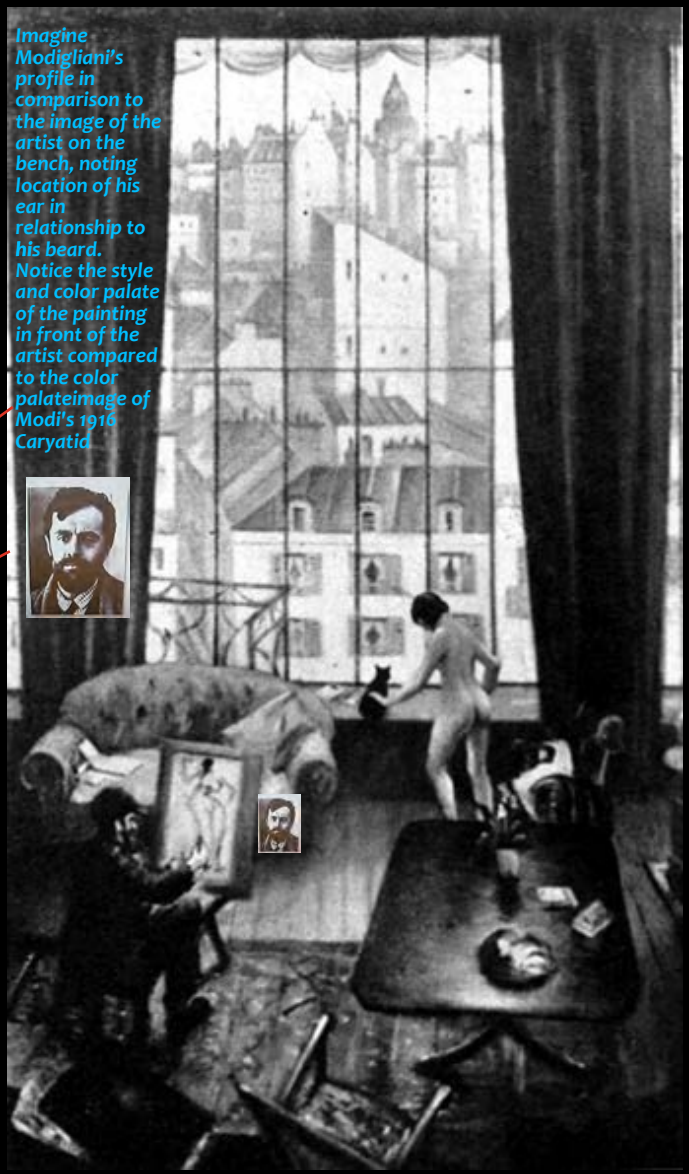

Art History Series | Through the Eyes of the Artist: Modigliani
Hudson Library & Historical Society
6.13K subscribers

Confirmation Clues - Notice the colorization in the 1915 Caryatid that has been attributed to Alice Prin and the similarity of colors in the painting on the artist bench. It is well known Modigliani was obsessed with sketching Alice at Restaurant Chez Rosalie.

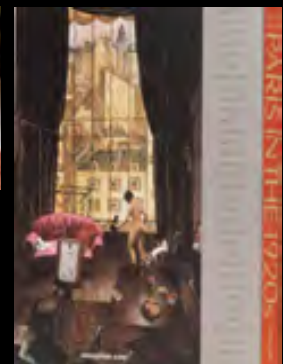

Imagine Modigliani's profile in comparison to the image of the artist on the bench, noting location of his ear in relationship to his beard. Notice the style and color palate of the painting in front of the artist compared to the color palate image of Modi's 1916 Caryatid

Rue #3 Joseph Bara in Monparnasse: where Zabrowski lived with his partner Hanka. It is well documented that he rented a Studio for Modigliani in 1917 in the same building and supplied him with models. Alice Prin refers to Zabrowski in her Memoirs. It is also known that in 1917 at this Studio most all of Modi's nude portraits were painted. Zabrowski wrote his address on the back of several of Modigliani's canvases in 1917 in anticipation of the Berthe Weill Exhibition. So the painting could be returned after the exhibition or if there were any disruptions.

Quote from Kiki's 1929 First Edition Memoirs, Chapter XIX "Posing" - 1918-19
 "Kisling's promised not to bawl me out any more. He's given me a contract for three months. But most of the time I'm a mess as a model. He yells at the top of his voice to make me laugh, or else-----makes all sorts of funny noises, and we try to see who can outdo the other. A great little playmate"
 "Zborowski climbs the stairs several times in the course of the morning, just to get an eyeful and see how things are coming along"

Discovering the Pillow Source in Modigliani's Sitting Nude of "Kiki de Montparnasse"

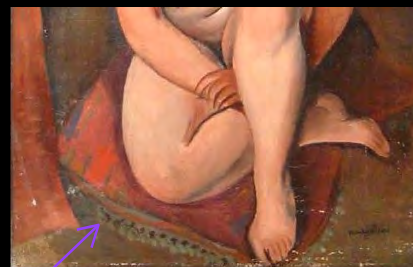

Modigliani on the Move

Photo of Dr. Paul Alexandre, (seen top of cart) moving Modigliani's belongings from "rue du Delta" (9th arrondissement in Paris) to "rue Drancourt" (18th arrondissement). Pillow Kiki sat for subject painting is circled in foreground. For comparison see cropped image of painting to right. Photo was taken in 1913 by an anonymous photographer.

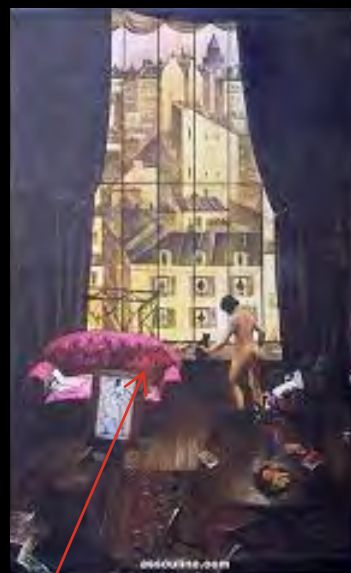

Pillow from Photo above

Photo of July 5, 1913, showing the moving of studio materials from the artist's Delta studio and some of Modigliani's studio possessions and paintings by Dr. Alexandre (on top of the cart) and friends to a new studio location at 10 place Dancourt. Jean Dupont has an armchair on his head and at his feet is a large pillow with edge décor. The two paintings on the ground, painted by Modigliani are described next to the Ceroni- cataloged images in Exhibit 1-b. This helps support that in the subject painting of this report, the model is seated on a similar pillow painted with similar edges as shown in the below photo crop and images. The edges of the photo pillows show a similar edge pattern used in the painting image. The pillows in the photos were part of the artist's studio used by Modigliani and being moved.

Kiki sitting on Pillow in Subject Painting

Above: Back Cover illustration of Kiki's Memoirs. Inside Kiki's Montparnasse apartment "Pillow" in Subject Painting may be on what appears to be her red velvet couch

Exhibit-1b from Confirmation Clues Report

Discovering the Pillow Source in Modigliani's Painting "Kiki de Montparnasse"

Another photo of July 5, 1913, showing Dr. Alexandre (behind the cart) with friends moving studio materials from the artist's Delta studio including Modigliani's studio possessions and paintings to a new studio location at 10 place Dancourt. There are two pillows lying on the ground next to the rear of the cart. There are also two paintings shown in Exhibit-1a (shown below with description). These are Ceroni Cataloged images of Modigliani paintings. This helps support that in the subject painting of this report, the model is seated on a similar pillow painted with similar edges as shown in the photos in Exhibits 1a and 1b. The pillows in the two photos were part of the artist's studio used by Modigliani and are being moved.

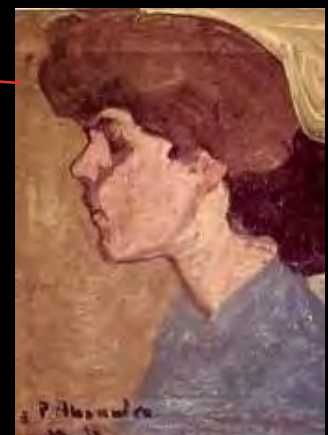

Pillows from the photo above
stacked up for moving

Modigliani, Melancholy nude, 1908
Oil on canvas, 81 x 54, Richard Nathanson collection, London

Modigliani, Head of a woman in profile, 1906-7
Oil on canvas, 35.5 x 29.5
Inscribed 'A. P. Alexandre'
Private collection.
This is one of the paintings Modigliani brought with him when he first arrived at the Delta in November or December 1907.

Amedeo Modigliani Caryatid - 1915-16

Gouache and watercolor with chalk and graphite on wove paper

Modigliani made more than seventy drawings of caryatids. Their highly stylised manner shows his absorption in a wide variety of arts then considered to be 'primitive', including African and especially Cambodian carvings. The drawings were preparatory sketches for sculptures, and Modigliani is said to have conceived of a 'temple to humanity' surrounded by hundreds of such caryatids. However, he appears to have made only one carving directly related to this crouching figure.

Artist:

Amedeo Modigliani \(Italian, 1884–1920\)

Culture:

Italian

Titles:

Caryatid - has been attributed to Kiki de Montparnasse

Date: c. 1915-16

Place: Paris, France

Medium: Gouache and watercolor with chalk and graphite on wove paper

Dimensions: Sheet: 55 3/8 × 26 3/16 in. (140.7 × 66.5 cm)

Frame (outer): 63 1/4 × 34 × 2 5/8 in. (160.7 × 86.4 × 6.7 cm)

Credit Line Gift of Oveta Culp Hobby

Object number 84.412

Explore Further

Prints and Drawings

Object Type:

DRAWINGS, PASTELS & WATERCOLORS

Description:

Amedeo Modigliani came to Paris in 1906, aspiring to become a sculptor. He befriended Constantin Brancusi, assimilating his treatment of simplified forms while retaining a greater naturalism. About 1913, Modigliani began to envision a “temple of humanity” that would feature monumental caryatid figures carved from stone, based on archetypes found in Classical architecture. He made numerous studies, of which this example is one of the largest and most painterly. Lack of funds put an end to this project, however, and Modigliani gave up sculpture for painting shortly thereafter.

Provenance:

Oveta Culp Hobby, Houston, by November 19, 1984; given to MFAH, 1984

Exhibition History:

"Amedeo Modigliani," Kunstsammlung Nordrhein-Westfalen, Düsseldorf, January 19–April 7, 1991; Kunsthaus Zürich, April 19–July 21, 1991.

"Amedeo Modigliani Retrospective," The Jewish Museum, New York, May 21–September 19, 2004; The Art Gallery of Ontario, Toronto, October 23, 2004–January 23, 2005.

"Against the Current: 20th Century Representational Art in the Collection of the MFAH," The Museum of Fine Arts, Houston, October 7, 2006–September 2, 2007.

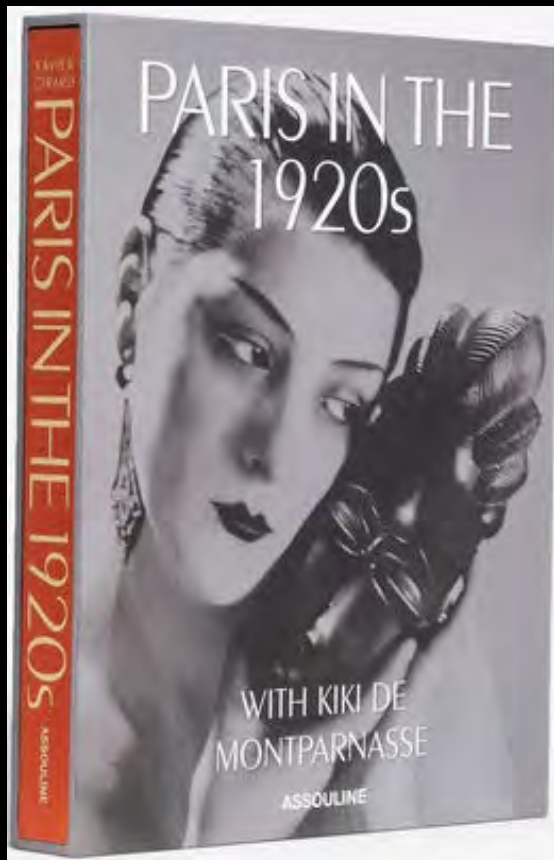

"Europe 1900-1975: Selections from the Museum's Collection," The Museum of Fine Arts, Houston, March 4, 2014–January 4, 2015.

"Modigliani Unmasked," The Jewish Museum, New York, September 17, 2017–February 4, 2018. Catalogue raisonné Pfannstiel 68

Cataloguing data may change with further research.

If you have questions about this work of art or the MFAH Online Collection please contact us

We hang out with a crowd called Dadaists and some called Surrealists — for my part, I don't see much difference....
— Kiki de Montparnasse

Publication due to popular demand is back in Stock! - Assolline

<https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=kKeZRK7Izlg>

assouline.com

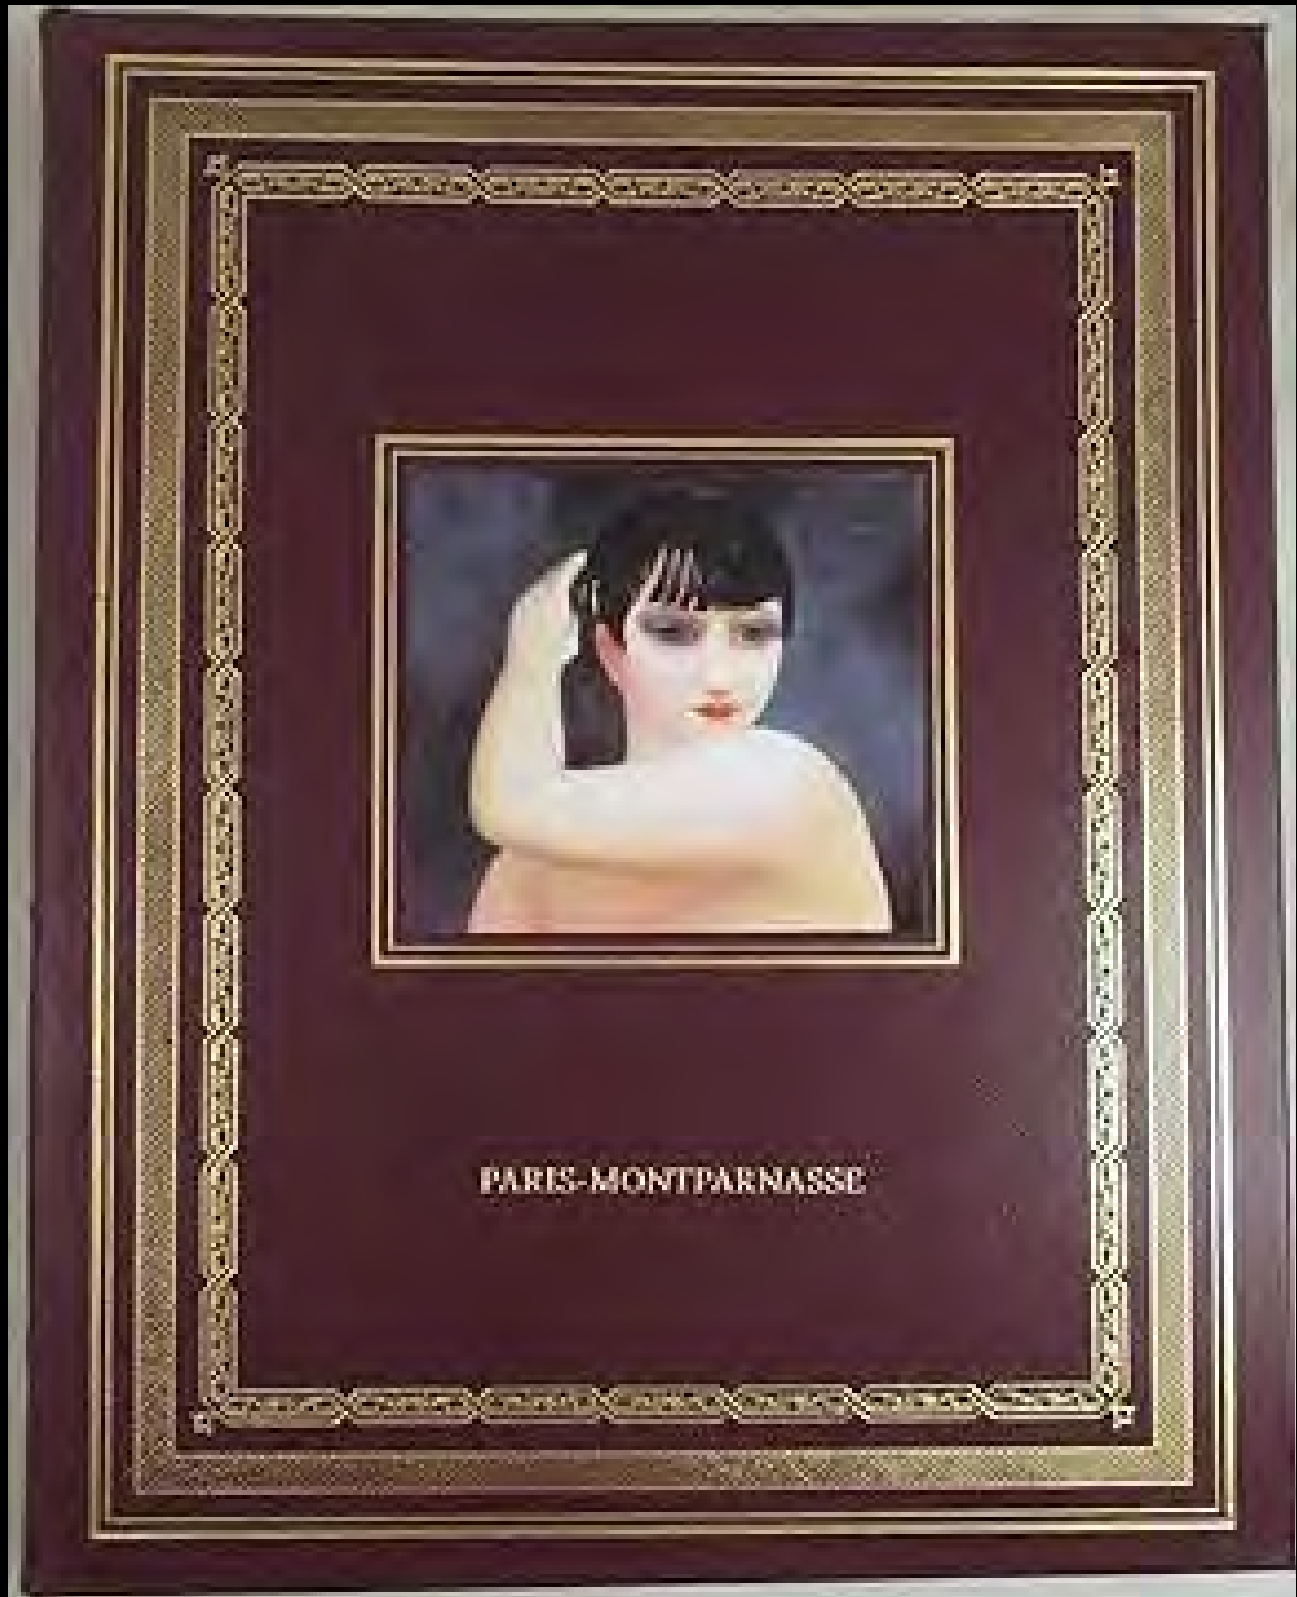

MAN RAY
DUCHAMP
MODIGLIANI
KISLING
SOUTINE
PASCIN
HEMINGWAY
PICASSO
BRASSAI
LEGER
MATISSE
CALDER
BRETON
ARAGON
KROHC
VAN DONGEN
COCTEAU
FOUJITA
TZARA
TANGUY
GIACOMETTI
ERNST
MIRO
PICABIA
MONDRIAN
DESNOS
ARP
MAGRITTE
GRIS
DE CHIRICO
MASSON
BRANCUSI
FITZGERALD

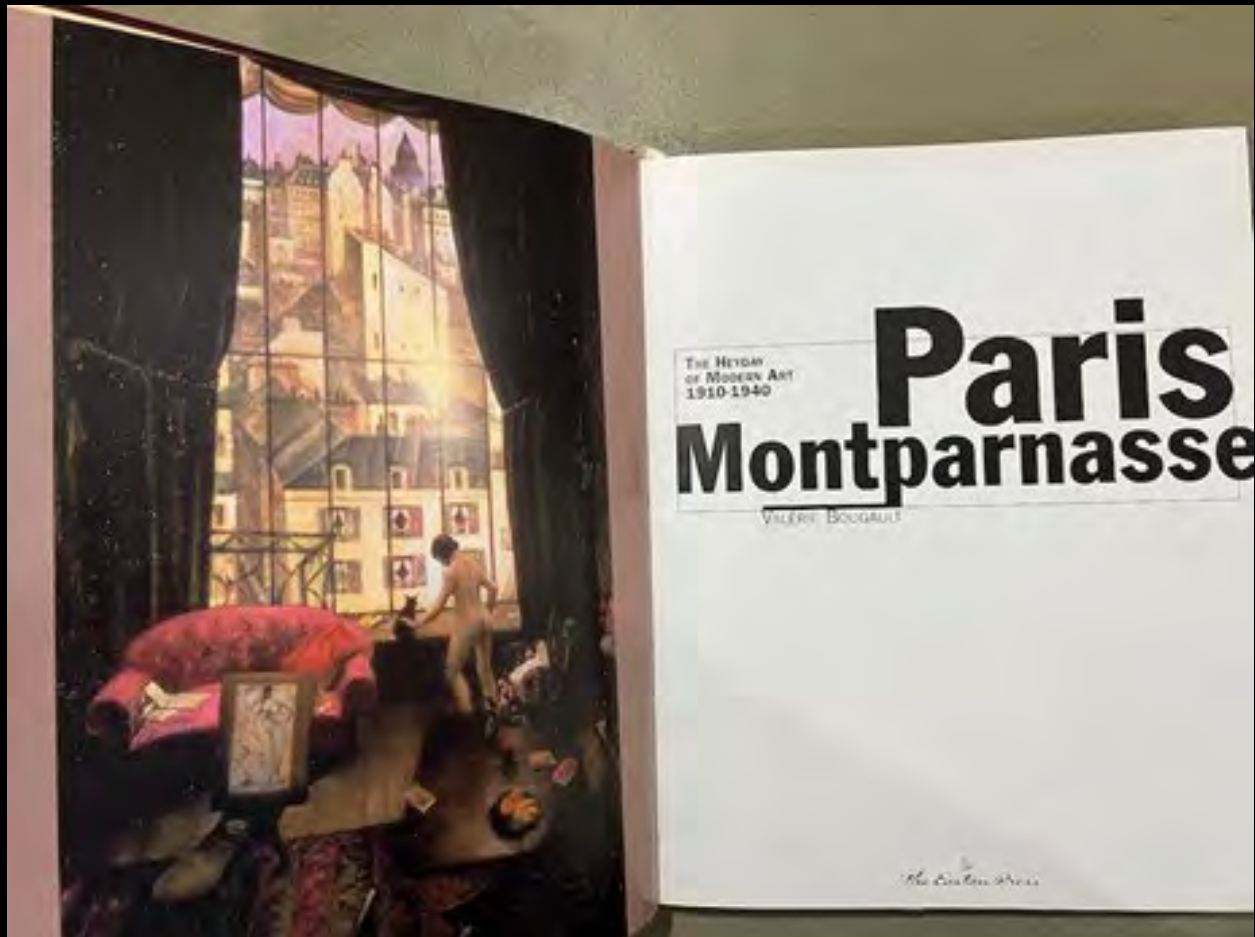

XAVIER
GIRARD

PARIS IN THE 1920S

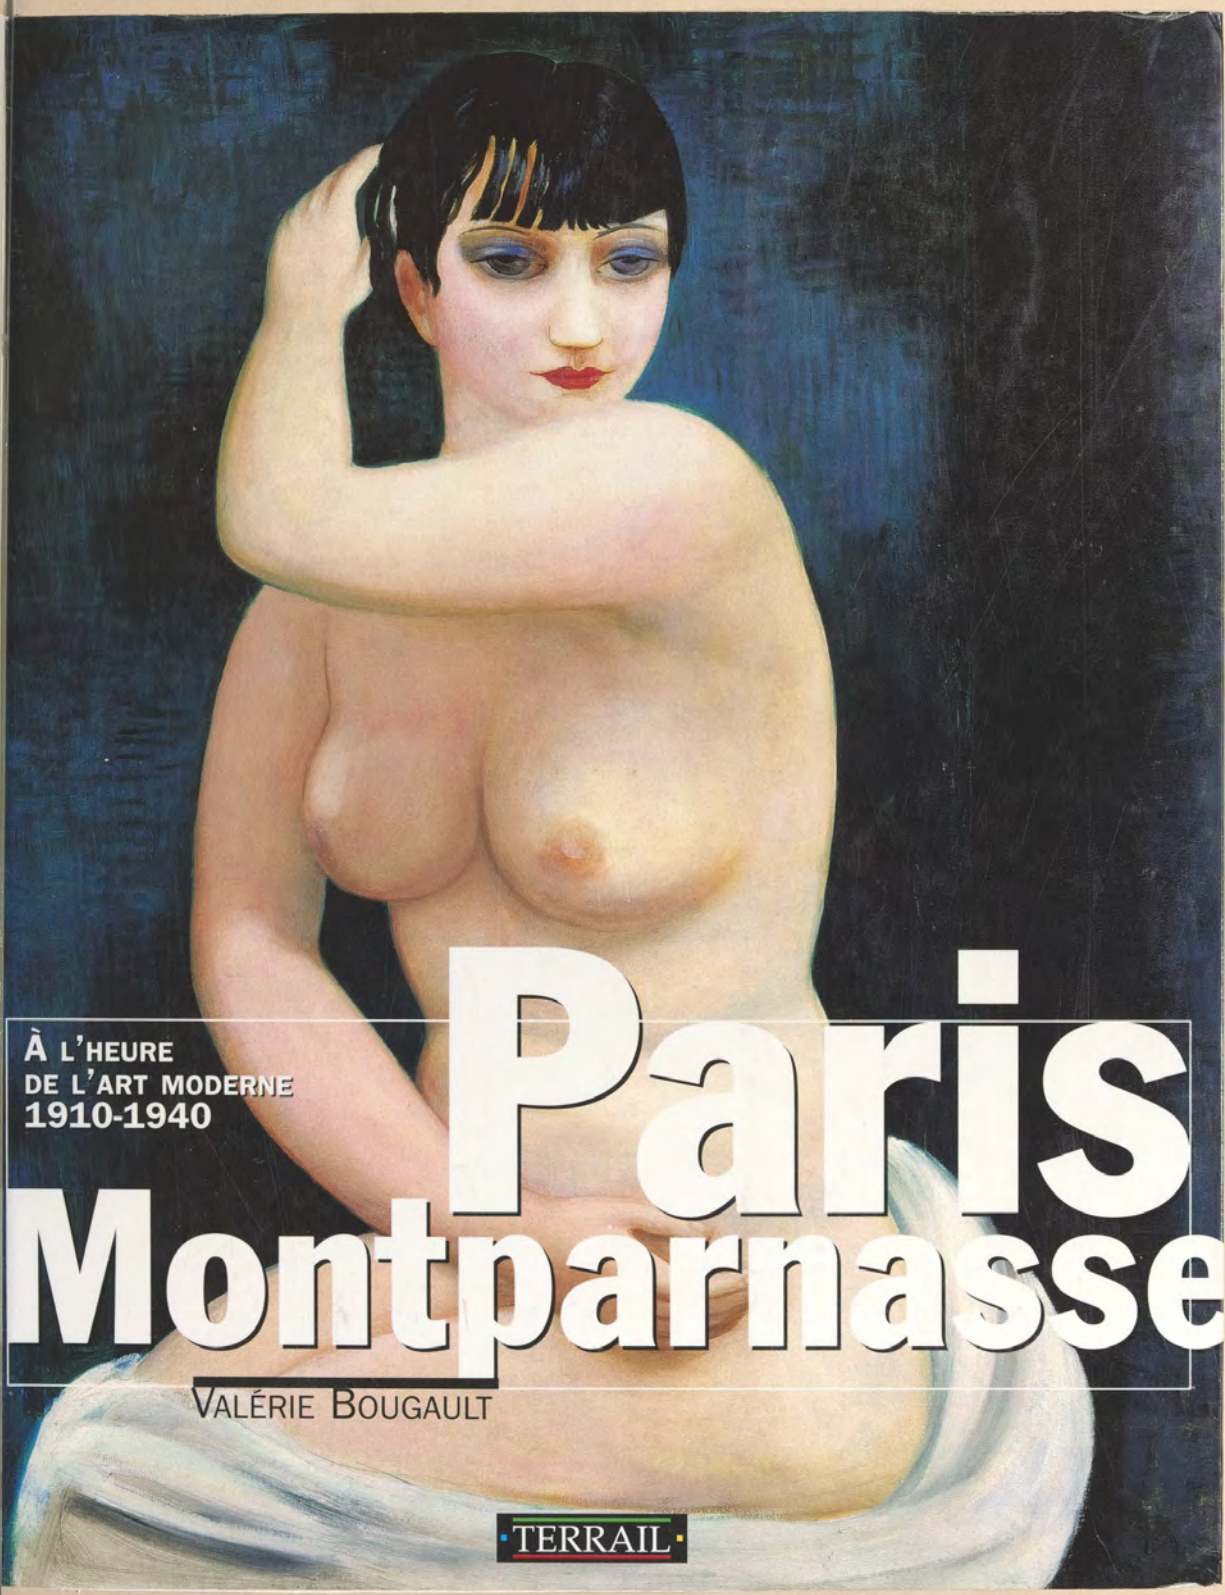

ASSOULINE

Valerie Bougault - Paris Montparnasse: The Heyday of Modern Art 1910-1940 [Glorious Art]

In the interwar years, in burgeoning Montparnasse, artists searched relentlessly to capture the image reflected by the human face. Each in his own fashion sought to reconstruct, in compelling portraits, human representation, Matisse and Chagall set their paintings ablaze with pure color, Soutine deployed naked expressiveness, Modigliani mastered the nude, while Picasso chose the road of deconstruction. The creative individuality inspired freedom, a freedom which was to imbue Montparnasse with a unique atmosphere and astound the visitors who flocked from the world over to discover its magic.

À L'HEURE
DE L'ART MODERNE
1910-1940

Paris Montparnasse

VALÉRIE BOUGAULT

• TERRAIL •

MONTPARNASSE, LEVER DE RIDEAU. ILS SONT TOUS LÀ AU RENDEZ-VOUS :
Matisse LE PROFESSEUR, Modigliani L'ÉLÉGANT,
LE GRAND Picasso, Chagall, Soutine, Léger, Foujita, ET TANT D'AUTRES...

ILS SE RETROUVENT À LA TERRASSE DE LA ROTONDE OU DE LA COUPOLE, BROSSENT ET SCULPTENT DANS LES ATELIERS MISÉRABLES

DE LA RUCHE OU DES BOULEVARDS, COURENT LES FÊTES LES PLUS FOLLES
ET VENDENT LEUR ART AUX RICHES COLLECTIONNEURS VENUS D'OUTRE-ATLANTIQUE.
ET TANDIS QUE SOUFFLE LE GRAND VENT DE LA MODERNITÉ, MONTPARNASSE ÉCRIT, PENDANT PLUS D'UNE VINGTAINE D'ANNÉES,
UNE PAGE DE L'HISTOIRE DE L'ART.
PARIS-MONTPARNASSE, LE RÉCIT D'UN MYTHE.

PLUS DE
150 ILLUSTRATIONS
EN COULEUR

ISBN 2-87939-110-5

9 782879 391106

Pierre Terrail / Finest S.A.

Une filiale du département Liris

Bayard Presse

3 7531 00071668 9

CHRISTIE'S

Christopher Richard Wynne Nevinson, A.R.A. (1889-1946) - Sur la Terrasse, Montparnasse

DETAILS:

Christopher Richard Wynne Nevinson, A.R.A. (1889-1946)

Sur la Terrasse, Montparnasse

signed 'C R W NEVINSON' (lower right) oil on canvas

24 x 30 in. (61 x 76.2 cm.)

Painted in 1925.

PROVENANCE:

The artist, until 1937.

Taff Fennimore, Richmond, Surrey, by whom sold to the present owner's family circa 1950s.

LITERATURE:

C.R.W. Nevinson, Paint and Prejudice, London, 1937, illustrated as 'Sur le Terasse, Parnasse'.

R. Ingleby (et. al.), exhibition catalogue, C.R.W. Nevinson, The Twentieth Century, Imperial War Museum, London, 1999, p. 163, illustrated.

EXHIBITION:

possibly New York, Leger Galleries, Exhibition of the works of C.R.W. Nevinson, April 1931, no. 2 as 'Terraces of Montparnasse'.
London, Imperial War Museum, C.R.W. Nevinson: The Twentieth Century, October 1999 - January 2000, p. 163, no. 109, illustrated.

SPECIAL NOTICE:

No VAT will be charged on the hammer price, but VAT at 17.5% will be added to the buyer's premium, which is invoiced on a VAT inclusive basis.

LOT ESSAY:

Dating from 1925, the present work depicts Parisian café society and was painted during Nevinson's most productive period. It was painted a year after Sunday evening, punts of the Thames at Henley (sold in these rooms, 30 November 2000, lot 35, for a world record price, £201,750, private collection) and both paintings display elements of Nevinson's return to pre-war post-impressionism.

Although after the war, Nevinson had declared that he had given up futurism, Sur la Terrasse, Montparnasse is indebted to Nevinson's involvement with the Futurist movement, displayed in the striking diagonals shooting beyond the electric lights depicted. 'Electric lights recur frequently in Nevinson's work, as they did in the work of many of the Futurists; Nevinson recalls in Paint and Prejudice the first time he saw a light bulb when staying at a hotel in Paris with his mother before the War. Visually, he was clearly as much interested in what they hid as what they revealed, thereby equating them with a complex set of values' (R. Ingleby (et. al.), loc. cit).

The present work is readable across the picture plane, however, there is a fragmentation of the subject matter that is typical of Nevinson's compositions. The clustering confusion of heads that are crammed into the confines of the canvas convey to the viewer the cacophony of noise that must have risen from these outdoor cafés. The sharp diagonals descending from the lights are echoed in the roofs of the buildings and brought forward into the lower half of the painting, holding the crowd of people in a snapshot of stillness within their mass of sociableness.

Sisley Huddleston

drawn in Paris, c. 1925
 pastel with pencil 51.2 x 34.2 cm signed l.r., pencil "Stella Bowen", not dated inscribed l.c., pencil "Sisley Huddleston" - private collection

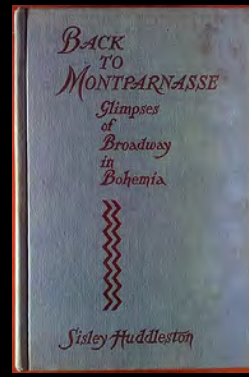

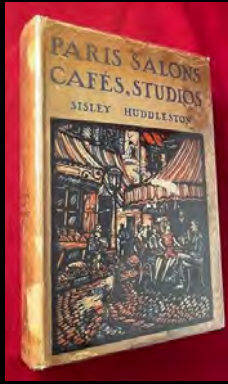

Sisley Huddleston (1883–1952) was an English writer who adopted France as his home. Posted to Paris during the First World War, Huddleston became an expert in French politics and history. He also found time to socialise with and write about the literary and artistic expatriates of Paris, including Ford and Bowen. In fact, he was so often to be found at the famous English-language bookshop, "Shakespeare and Co." that he was dubbed "Mr. Shakespeare".

Huddleston was ambivalent about the social and political changes he witnessed in his beloved France after the First World War and came to sympathise with the emerging right wing movements of the 1930's. During the German occupation he remained in France and was a vocal supporter of the collaborationist Vichy Government, leading to his imprisonment after the Allied liberation. However, always a journalist, Huddleston continued to write throughout his public rise and fall.

Other Works by Stella Bowen:

- Ford Madox Ford
- Sisley Huddleston
- Study for Le Restaurant Lavigne
- Mary Widney
- Julia Madox Ford
- Ford playing solitaire
- Edith Sitwell
- Reclining nude – the nude model in this work resembles Kiki de Montparnasse further investigation is needed to see if the artist and model had any relationship in 1931. In the description of the painting it states; "She segmented the canvas into four main areas: the decorative red curtain, the reclining nude, black hair framing the head, and the luxurious quilt. Her use of the decorative interplay of sensual, languid and elongated curves is reminiscent of Henri Matisse and Amedeo Modigliani."
- Self-portrait
- Julia
- Le glacier
- Fords chair
- Le masque
- Mask
- La terrasse
- Interior, Paris

Sisley Huddleston (28 May 1883 – 14 July 1952) was a British journalist and writer. After editing a British forces newspaper in the First World War, he was resident in Paris after the war until the 1930's, writing for The Times (London) and the Christian Science Monitor. In his Europe in Zigzags (1929) he supported the Pan-Europe manifesto of Richard von Coudenhove-Kalergi.^[1] War Unless (1933) was a "deliberately alarmist"^[2] call for revision of the Treaty of Versailles.

During the Second World War, he was in Vichy France, taking French citizenship and writing in sympathy with the regime.^[3] He interviewed Marshal Philippe Pétain. He was arrested in October 1944 by French authorities on treason charges.^[4] He was imprisoned by the Free French, in 1944 as a Vichy collaborator.^[5] He wrote a number of works that were critical in particular of the Allied handling of the Liberation of France and politicians' diplomacy.

Free download of Book - Those Europeans - Study of Foreign Faces -1924

Works:

- Peace-making at Paris, T. Fisher Unwin, 1919.
- Poincaré, A Biographical Portrait, Little, Brown & Company, 1924.
- Those Europeans: Studies Of Foreign Faces, G.P. Putman's Sons, 1924.
- France and the French, C. Scribner's Sons, 1925.
- France: The France of Today, C. Scribner's Sons, 1927.
- In and About Paris, Methuen, 1927 [Illustrated by Hanslip Fletcher].
- Mr. Paname: A Paris Fantasia, George H. Doran Co., 1927.
- Bohemian Literary and Social Life in Paris: Salons, Cafes, Studios, G.G. Harrap & Co., Ltd., 1928. (American edition: Paris: Salons, Cafes, Studios, J. B. Lippincott Company, 1928.)
- Back to Montparnasse, Lippincott; January 1, 1931
- Articles de Paris: A Book of Essays, The Macmillan Company, 1928.
- Louis XIV in Love & in War, Harper & Brothers, 1929.
- Europe in Zigzags: Social, Artistic, Literary, and Political Affairs on the Continent, G.G. Harrap, 1929.
- Normandy: Its Charm, Its Curiosities, Its Antiquities, Its History, Its Topography, Doubleday, Doran & Company, Inc., 1929.
- A History of France, 1929.
- Between the River and the Hills: a Normandy pastoral, J. B. Lippincott Co., 1930.
- What's Right with America, J.B. Lippincott Company, 1930.
- Back to Montparnasse: Glimpses of Broadway in Bohemia, G.G. Harrap, 1931.
- The Captain's Table. A Transatlantic Log, J.B. Lippincott Co., 1932.
- War Unless, V. Gollancz, Ltd., 1933.
- In my Time: An Observer's Record of War and Peace, Cape, 1938.
- Cities and Men, by Charles Inman Barnard, E.P. Dutton & Co., 1940 [as editor].
- Free France and Britain. the Franco-British Companion, 1941 [edited by William G. Corp: contributor].
- Le Livre de Saint-Pierre. Vie, Mort et Renaissance d'un Village de France, 1942.
- Le Mythe de la Liberté – Entretiens en Temps de Guerre, H. Lardanchet, 1943.
- Terreur 1944, Témoignage d'un Embastillé, Éditions de la Couronne, 1947.
- Avec le Maréchal, 1948.
- Mediterranean Blue, Evans Bros., 1948.
- Pétain, Patriot or Traitor?, A. Dakers, 1951.
- Popular Diplomacy and War, R.R. Smith Publisher, 1954.
- France: the Tragic Years, 1939–1947; an Eyewitness Account of War, Occupation, and Liberation, The Devin-Adair Company, 1955.
- Elisabeth d'Angleterre, Le Mystère d'une Reine Vierge, 1960.

Selected articles:

- "The Last Bohemian", The Living Age, 11 January 1919.

Bar-

Below left - Photo of Kiki - 1928 - Pg 77 - One of over 20 black & white nude & partial nude photos of Kiki and some of her friends. Note

Characteristics in 1928 Photo of Kiki, taken just before she was officially crowned, Kiki, "Queen of Montparnasse"

- Kiki's signature slightly extended lipstick line - seen in many photos/paintings
- Body type, hands, fingers, nose, navel all are consistent with other closeup photography
- Kiki had a condition that prevented growth of pubic hair - a fact not widely circulated in artistic circles.

There is a scene in the French Animated film, where Foujita discovers this in a light moment - It is well known that Kiki asked all the artists and photographers she modeled for to make accommodations to keep her secret. The artists obliged although several photographers did not follow her instruction and did not retouch the negatives, including three below by Julien Mandel.

Animated Film - Mademoiselle Kiki et les Montparnos - 2013 Short Film- French w/ English subtitles

See animated film at 5:23 to 5:57 of humorous scene with Foujita and Kiki when he first confronts her about her hair anomaly. The information also confirmed at _____ of the conversation with art historian and author Ellen de Belerville and another Kiki expert.

Key moments in animated film:

- 0:07 - Kiki's Childhood and Family
- 1:46 - Kiki of Montparnasse
- 2:09 - Kiki's First Flirtation with Utrillo
- 4:41 - Kiki's Insinuation of a relationship with Modigliani
- 5:23 - Kiki's with Foujita - modeling session
- 6:37 - Kiki's Career in the Movies
- 7:40 - Kiki's Success at the Jockey Club
- 8:45 - Kiki's Love Life with Henri Broca
- 10:15 - Kiki's Memoirs at the Falstaff
- 12:39 - Kiki and Titine's First Flirtation

25-min Conversation w/author & historian Ellen de Bellerville & Kiki Biographer

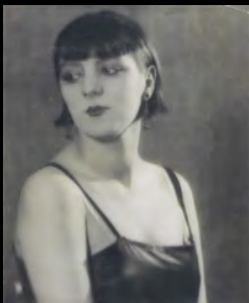

Edith de Belleville is a well known tour guide in Paris, a lawyer historian and author. She wrote a book in French about inspirational Parisian women from the past "Belles et Rebel les " (Edition du 81) She also teaches Jewish heritage in Paris at Gustave Eiffel University (Marne-La-Vallée).

Left/center right - Julien Mandel - 1915-16 - 2 photos were used for erotic postcards

Photo Library Collage - Alice Prin - Ages 13-20
depicting body type, posture, position of the hands, arms and bob haircut
Highlighting similarities to "Lying Nude with Joined Hands" in Ceroni Catalogue

Alice at age 14

Below left - Street Scene. UNSPECIFIED - CIRCA 1800: Street Scene. After the drawing by Trent from the book Back to Montparnasse by Sisley Huddleston, published 1931 (Photo by Universal History Archive/Getty Images)

Right - UNSPECIFIED - CIRCA 1800: Cabaret in Montparnasse, Paris, France in the 1920's. After the drawing by Trent from the book Back to Montparnasse by Sisley Huddleston, published 1931 (Photo by Universal History Archive/Getty Images)

Left: Image of "Kiki de Montparnasse" in 1922 Note style of hat similar to green hat in Nevison's "Studio in Montparnasse" Other 3 images with similar hats. Bottom left Kiki with Foujita

Center: French painter and models in 1920's Paris in Montparnasse café 'La Rotonde'. Kiki de Montparnasse left. Walls covered with artists' paintings. Bohemian, literary and social life in Paris - Sisley Huddleston 1928 (Photo by Bridgeman via Getty Images)

Details:

Credit: Culture Club / Contributor

Collection: Hulton Archive

Date created: January 01, 1920